Print	After the Death of a Child: Living With Loss Through the Years	Finkbeiner, Ann K.	1996	Death Grief	1	PC	b 99-2
By focusing on the long-term impact of losing a child, Finkbeiner has raised issues and concerns that are rarely discussed. Based on extensive interviews and grief research, she explains how parents have changed 5 to 25 years after the deaths of their children. The first half of the book discusses the short- and long-term effects of the child's death on the parents' relationships with the outside world, that is, their spouses, other children, friends, and relatives. The second half details the effect on the parents' internal world. Finkbeiner's central point is not so much how parents grieve for their children, but how they love them.

A professor of pastoral care and counseling the author describes a life-style for Christians who care enough to risk confronting others when differences become important, especially those who care deeply about relationships. On the premise that conflict is not good or bad but natural and "truthing in love", he outlines a methodology for a constructive form of confrontation, as a Christlike response to any conflict. Useful for Pastors, care-workers, youth, adults, couples and leaders of congregations in conflict.
